OF WATER & ENERGY

Set off to visit the lakes and hydroelectric complex of Lévézou and Les Raspes. This grand-scale project started after the Second World War, and it was only in 1952 that the reservoirs were filled at last and the power plants began to produce electricity.

There are a whopping 27 km of galleries linking the various sections of the complex together.

The water flows from the Pont-de-Salars reservoir and basses through Bage, Pareloup, Villefranche-de-Panat and St-Amans, before cascading down onto the Pouget power plant, in the village of Truel 450 metres further down.
